

Just one loose stitch...

I am William, 57 years old; I have a wife and two daughters; I work as an accountant and love to run for a hobby (I did two marathons!); I have pancreatic cancer. Fortunately it had been discovered early. This is my story.

LESSONS LEARNED

When a patient is recovering well, there is no need to stay in the hospital. However, even after multiple days, complications could occur, resulting in an internal bleeding. Therefore remote monitoring could save lives, because of early detection.
